

Background: We have presented at Lincoln Elementary school for five of the last six years.

On 3/4/11 in a 5th grade class at the end of session #2 during the question period, a boy asked me: "Have you ever saved anybody?" I explained that sometimes a student will report abuse and ask for help on the written questions we receive and that we talk to the teacher and the counselor and the abused kid gets help. The teacher (who was fantastic) interjected: "I can tell you that three students right in this classroom over the last few years have 'had their lives saved' (her exact words) by this program by having the courage to speak up, report their abuse, and get help".

It is really good to realize that we are out there making a difference in kids lives.
